

SHE LOVED SCHARD IT MADE HER ILL

Letters From Duchess Profess
Undying Affection for Bogus
Count.

Tours, France, December 22.—A tempestuous day in the Court of the Duchess of Angoulême, when the trial of "Count" D'Aubry de Galigny and his American wife is being held on the charge of swindling, reached a climax this afternoon in the introduction of love letters, alleged to have been written to D'Aubry by the Duchess of Angoulême. The plaintiff in the case, while she was the wife of Charles Hamilton, Paine. During the reading of the letters, which the duchess refused to acknowledge as hers, the two women, the duchess and the "Countess," D'Aubry sat side by side exchanging furious glances, while the court room, filled with women, the duchess and the "Countess," were filled with sighs, murmurs and exclamations, as all strained to catch the words.

"I love you so hard," read Mr. Bernard, counsel for D'Aubry, "that it makes me ill. You have given yourself to me. All I ask is that you love me always. That is God's best gift. The day passes, day dies, but my love goes on forever. It is an immortal consuming flame that dulls me, sitting at your knees, cradled in your heart."

The duchess underwent a pitiless cross-examination as to her relations with D'Aubry, but she refused to answer many of the questions and begged the court to intervene to spare her. She charged that D'Aubry demanded $250,000 for the return of letters which she had written him, and that his entire conduct was that of a blackmailer after the discovery that the paintings were worthless. She denied that she presented jewelry to D'Aubry, including a golden padlock, bearing the inscription, "You have the key."

She denied also that she arranged for D'Aubry a contract with her husband for the purchase of pictures at $750,000 for her love for him, or that she said: "This shows that I am your guardian angel."

D'Aubry admitted having received $250,000 for which he did not furnish any goods, but he said the money was the Paine's and he was not to be held responsible for it.

Mr. Wylie and Mrs. Hichborn left on the same train, but one might have gone north and the other west. When in New York Mr. Wylie's temporary address always is the Union Club. Some of the New York papers found out that he had not been at the club for several days. Then they sprung this story.

"Has Mrs. Wylie made any attempt to get into communication with Mr. Wylie at the Union Club or elsewhere since he left?" Captain Hopkins was asked.

"I don't know," was the reply.

Well-known Washington Names.

Horace Wylie, who is about forty-five years old, graduated from Yale with the class of '83. He is the son of Judge Wylie, who presided over the trial of Mrs. Surratt for complicity in the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, and of whom it was said that he was the only man connected with the prosecution to escape a sudden or unnatural death.

Mrs. Wylie was Miss Katherine V. Hopkins, daughter of former Representative Hopkins, of Pennsylvania, and noted for her beauty and accomplishments. Mr. Wylie is a member of the Metropolitan, Chevy Chase, Alibi and University Clubs, of this city. They have four children.

Philip Hichborn, a recent graduate from Harvard, is only twenty-eight years old, but already has made a name for himself locally as a lawyer, and his fiction writings have gained for him no small place among magazine contributors. He is the son of the late Rear-Admiral Philip Hichborn, for years chief of the Bureau of Construc-

MAKES RECORD VOYAGE

Mauretania Arrived at Fishguard at 10:22 o'clock Last Night.

Fishguard, Wales, December 22.—The Mauretania, which left Liverpool December 10, in an attempt to make a record voyage to New York and return in twelve days, arrived here at 10:22 o'clock to-night. The quick voyage across the ocean and back and the rapid taking on of cargo at New York, enabling the magnificent passengers to reach their destinations before Christmas, is a source of the greatest satisfaction both among the passengers and those who gathered here to meet the steamer.

It was the first time that a disembarkation at night by a big liner has been attempted at this port. It was a novel scene. The harbor was ablaze with searchlights, flares and rockets. Vessels blew their whistles, sirens brayed and the crowds cheered as the Mauretania steamed in, her band playing and her decks crowded with passengers.

The weather throughout the Eastern voyage was favorable. By the aid of four searchlights the 600 passengers and the mail were landed with the greatest expedition. The passage of the vessel occupied four days fifteen hours and fifty-seven minutes. She maintained an average speed of 25.97 knots.

Banquet at Anglo-Saxon Club to Officers of American Fleet.

London, December 22.—Lord Northcote, who, as Governor-General of Australia, welcomed the American battleships on their around-the-world cruise, presided to-night at the dinner of the Anglo-Saxon Club given in honor of the officers of the fourth division of the United States Atlantic fleet, now at Gravesend. He spoke of the hospitality which he received in America when he was a young diplomat, and complimented the fleet on its splendid maneuvers in Australian waters.

Rear-Admiral Thomas B. Howard, commanding the division, said in reply: "There is not an officer or man in the fleet who will ever forget the welcome we received in Australia. There is not one who will ever forget the welcome we have been given in the mother country."

Admiral Howard said that all peoples wanted peace, but he asked, "If no nation had a fleet, who would enforce the decrees of the arbitration court?"

MORTON MARYE SLEEPS IN DEATH

Curtis, Senator A. C. Harman and Colonel William H. Palmer.

Born at Fredericksburg.

Morton Marye was the son of John Lawrence and Anna Maria Burton Marye. He was born on September 7, 1820, at "Brompton," the family home, at Fredericksburg. Reaching manhood, he became a merchant in Alexandria. He always had a taste for military affairs, and became captain in the Alexandria Rifles, which were called out for active service in the John Brown raid on Harper's Ferry in 1859.

At the outbreak of the War Between the States the company went into service, with Captain Marye at its head. The command was mustered in as Company A of the Seventeenth Virginia Infantry on March 16, 1861. He was engaged in most of the early battles of the war, including First Manassas, Blackburn's Ford and Falls Church, and was always conspicuous for his gallantry.

On April 26, 1862, he was elected lieutenant-colonel, and in November of the same year he was made colonel of the Seventeenth, to succeed Colonel M. D. Corse, upon the latter's commission as brigadier-general.

Made Prisoner.

Colonel Marye was captured at the battle of Frasier's Farm, on May 31, 1862, and was subsequently imprisoned at Fort Warren, in Boston harbor. Within a few weeks, however, he was exchanged, and returned to his command on August 17.

While leading a charge at Second Manassas, on August 30, 1862, Colonel Marye was wounded in the knee, the ball penetrating the joint and necessitating amputation.

Upon his release from the hospital he was placed on the Military Court, which was in continuous session in Richmond. He served in this capacity until the close of the war. He was assisted by his brother, but refused to accept the title, and would not permit its use, saying that he had not earned it on the field.

Returning to his own city, Colonel Marye was in 1865 elected clerk of the Corporation Court of Alexandria, which position he held until 1870. He was elected to the office of Auditor of Public Accounts. He was elected by a vote of 36 against 45 for S. Brown Allen, the incumbent, now postmaster at Staunton.

He entered upon the duties of his position on January 2, 1881, and from that day until a short while before his death he has been a familiar figure about the Capitol and in Richmond.

He had been in office but a short while before his name became a synonym for honesty and fair dealing. He carefully scrutinized every account presented for his consideration, and

BATTling WITH STORM

Laura C. Hall Slowly Working Her Way Up Coast.

Boston, Mass., December 22.—While all sorts of rumors and conjectures as to the probable fate of the British schooner Laura C. Hall, of Parrsboro, N. S., have been circulating since she was captured off Cape Cod battling with the storm of December 18, the Hall has been slowly working her way up the coast. Last night she came into Boston harbor for shelter, but during the night part of her anchors and was driven ashore on the northwest side of Long Island. There she was discovered to-day. Two tugs went to her assistance, but up to this evening they had not succeeded in pulling her afloat.

The Laura C. Hall, in command of Captain Rockwell, is bound from Portland, Me., for New York, with a cargo of coal. When discovered to-day she was ashore bow first and badly tilted up.

The latest report about the Hall was that she had probably sunk on Great Round Shoal, about ten miles to the eastward of Nantucket, where a submerged vessel was discovered to-day. The identity of this latter vessel has not yet been established.

Her mother, who is seventy-eight years old, also survives her.

many and many a time has he arrested claims which were unjust or illegal. Though honored by all with whom he came in contact, Colonel Marye was the most modest of men. Nothing made him so uncomfortable nor, in fact, so aroused his ire, as a complimentary mention of his honorable career. He did not desire to talk of himself, but was proud that he was enabled to have a part in the struggle, in which he put his whole heart and to which he pledged his life, his fortune and his sacred honor.

Ill for Some Time.

For some months his health had been failing, and his accustomed chair in the Auditor's office has been empty. From day to day those who frequent the Capitol have realized that the time was approaching when he would answer the last roll and report to his old commanders who have crossed the river.

It is doubtful if he ever had serious opposition for re-election to the office which he held so long. If he had, nobody can recall the fact. Had he lived until the end of the present term, on February 1, 1912, he would undoubtedly have been re-elected if he so desired.

Colonel Marye is survived by Mrs. Marye, who was Miss Caroline Homas, daughter of Robert S. and Mary Frances Gale of Thornton, Va., and by five children—Mrs. Marye, Mrs. Robert Voss Marye, Mrs. Robert Voss Marye, Jr., and Philip Thornton Marye.

Governor's Tribute.

After ordering the flag of the Commonwealth to be placed at half mast, and directing that the Auditor's office should remain closed until after the funeral, Governor Mann made the following statement:

"Nearly every man who has been in public life at any time during the last twenty-five years personally knew Colonel Morton Marye, and it is not too much to say that all of them will regret his death with a sense of personal loss. Certainly that is my feeling."

"The State has lost an officer of the strictest honor and integrity, who faithfully and efficiently discharged the duties of one of its most important offices, and has left behind him a record for clean, honest service which cannot be criticized. It has lost a citizen whose devotion in war and in peace is not surpassed. And very many of us have lost a whole-souled, genial friend whom we honored and loved."

Storm Warnings Displayed.

New Orleans, La., December 22.—At 4 P. M. the local Weather Bureau ordered storm warnings displayed along the Texas and Louisiana coast. The Weather Bureau bulletin says that a disturbance is developing over the Gulf of Mexico and that it will probably move northeast, attended by brisk and possibly high southeast winds, shifting to northwest.

Other Corporations.

Railroad corporations do not make the first of the year a dividend period, as a rule, although the Chesapeake and Ohio will announce its usual quarterly dividend in January.

A number of industrial corporations with offices located in Richmond are yet to announce the dividends they will pay to their stockholders on January 1. Counting in all classes of manufacturing and other corporations having offices in Richmond, it will be seen that about $1,000,000 will be paid out as profits to Richmond stockholders in January, while were the American Tobacco Company, which has many factories and large interests here, but which keeps its offices in Jersey City, counted in, the amount would be still larger.

County Gets Bloodhounds.

The pair of bloodhounds to be used in Henrico county, bought recently by the Board of Supervisors, were received yesterday by Deputy Sheriff W. W. Snyder.
